

Development as Service

Development as Service:

Worldviews, Law and Sustainable Development Goals

By

Dorine E. van Norren

Cambridge
Scholars
Publishing

Development as Service:
Worldviews, Law and Sustainable Development Goals

By Dorine E. van Norren

This book first published 2025

Cambridge Scholars Publishing

Lady Stephenson Library, Newcastle upon Tyne, NE6 2PA, UK

British Library Cataloguing in Publication Data
A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library

Copyright © 2025 by Dorine E. van Norren

All rights for this book reserved. No part of this book may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording or otherwise, without the prior permission of the copyright owner.

ISBN: 978-1-0364-5019-9

ISBN (Ebook): 978-1-0364-5020-5

TABLE OF CONTENTS

List of Tables .....	xi
List of Illustrations .....	xiii
The Complex Achievement of the Sustainable Development Goals, and Dialogue Beyond 2030 by Macharia Kamau .....	xv
Preface .....	xvii
Dedications .....	xxi
Acknowledgements .....	xxii
Abbreviations .....	xxvii
Executive Summary.....	xxx
Chapter 1 .....	1
Introduction .....
1.1 Purpose of the book .....	1
1.2 The inclusion of Global South views on development and (human) rights .....	3
1.3 Critical approach.....	7
1.4 Postcolonial Method and structure .....	9
1.5 Case study approach .....	12
1.6 Case study 1 methodology: Happiness .....	18
1.7 Case study 2 methodology: Ubuntu.....	21
1.8 Case study 3 methodology: Buen Vivir .....	23
1.9 SDG interviews methodology.....	25
1.10 Concluding remarks and book structure .....	26
1.11 References .....	27

Chapter 2 .....	33
Development Theories
2.1 Introduction .....	34
2.2 The genesis of modernism .....	34
2.3 Criticism of modernism .....	64
2.4 Postcolonial economics .....	70
2.5 Postcolonial law: TWAIL movement .....	74
2.6 Relevance of postcolonial economics for this research .....	77
2.7 Relevance of TWAIL for this research .....	79
2.8 Conclusion .....	81
2.9 Annex Different types of identity formation .....	82
2.10 References .....	85
Chapter 3 .....	97
The MDGs: History, Criticism and Recommendations for After 2015
3.1 Introduction .....	97
3.2 Declarations in the run-up to the MDGs .....	99
3.3 From Declaration to Goals .....	101
3.4 MDG summits in 2005 and 2010 .....	103
3.5 General criticism at the MDGs .....	104
3.6 Criticism at measuring poverty, hunger, education, gender, health .....	108
3.7 Pitfalls of results-based management .....	109
3.8 Gaps: what the MDGs failed to address .....	111
3.9 How have the MDGs been used in countries in the Global South? .....	113
3.10 Have the MDGs had an impact on donor policies? .....	115
3.11 Conclusion .....	117
3.12 References .....	121
Chapter 4 .....	127
Lessons from Human Rights and Wellbeing Theories
4.1 Introduction .....	128
4.2 Objective well-being .....	128
4.3 Subjective well-being .....	130
4.4 Broader wellbeing: Alternative economic indicators .....	132
4.5 Future well-being and sustainability .....	133
4.6 Livelihood approach .....	136
4.7 Security and development .....	137
4.8 Human rights approach .....	138
4.9 Gender approach .....	142

Development as Service: Worldviews, Law and Sustainable Development Goals	vii
4.10 Culture .....	146
4.11 Recommendations for the MDGs .....	147
4.12 Conclusion: Lessons for the MDGs from wellbeing and human rights theory .....	149
4.13 References .....	150
Chapter 5 .....	156
Economic and Demographic Issues, Global Public Goods and the Post MDG System
5.1 Introduction .....	157
5.2 Economic trends in 2010 .....	157
5.3 Trade and financial systems.....	159
5.4 New technology .....	161
5.5 Demographic development.....	162
5.6 Food security .....	164
5.7 Infrastructure and private sector .....	165
5.8 Global public goods.....	166
5.9 Institutional economy .....	172
5.10 Recommendations for the MDGs .....	173
5.11 Conclusion: Lessons for the MDGs from economic and demographic trends and global public goods.....	175
5.12 Possible new model derived from theoretic discussion .....	177
5.13 References .....	182
Chapter 6 .....	185
The SDGs: History and Criticism Regarding the Negotiation Process and Outcome
6.1 Introduction .....	186
6.2 Process.....	186
6.3 Outcome of the Open Working Group on Sustainable Development Goals .....	204
6.4 Merits.....	210
6.5 Criticism: Lacking dimensions .....	213
6.6 A vision without cultural values? .....	221
6.7 Western versus 'non-Western' values?.....	231
6.8 Communicating the SDGs: The definition of sustainable development .....	236
6.9 Conclusion.....	239
6.10 References .....	251

Chapter 7 .....	262
Happiness Theory of Bhutan
7.1 Introduction .....	263
7.2 Philosophy of Gross National Happiness .....	263
7.3 Merits and Criticism .....	266
7.4 Implementation in law, jurisprudence and policy .....	267
7.5 Reconstruction of law and SDG recommendations .....	272
7.6 Reconstruction of the economy and SDG recommendations ..	278
7.7 The Bhutanese SDG position.....	282
7.8 SDGs and GNH .....	283
7.9 Conclusion .....	291
7.10 References .....	300
Chapter 8 .....	321
Ubuntu Theory of (South) Africa
8.1 Introduction .....	322
8.2 Philosophy of Ubuntu .....	322
8.3 Merits and criticism .....	324
8.4 Implementation in law, jurisprudence and policy .....	325
8.5 Reconstruction of law and SDG recommendations .....	327
8.6 Reconstruction of the economy and SDG recommendations ..	336
8.7 SDG Position of (South) Africa.....	338
8.8 SDGs and Ubuntu.....	340
8.9 Conclusion .....	350
8.10 References .....	359
8.11 Annex Ubuntu and the interim constitution.....	380
Chapter 9 .....	381
Buen Vivir Theory of Ecuador
9.1 Introduction .....	382
9.2 Philosophy of Buen Vivir .....	382
9.3 Merits and criticism .....	384
9.4 Implementation in law, jurisprudence and policy .....	385
9.5 Reconstruction of law and SDG recommendations .....	414
9.6 Reconstruction of law and economy leading to SDG recommendations .....	417
9.7 The SDG position of Ecuador.....	420
9.8 SDGs and Buen Vivir .....	425
9.9 Conclusion .....	433
9.10 References .....	442

Chapter 10 .....	456
Similarities between Happiness, Ubuntu and Buen Vivir
10.1 Introduction .....	457
10.2 Cosmic unity and harmony (as a basis for justice) .....	459
10.3 The creation of the world from our mind/heart: spirit before material .....	462
10.4 Altruism .....	464
10.5 Deliberative democracy and decentralization, equality .....	466
10.6 Overarching legal principle and expanded notion of dignity and freedom .....	470
10.7 Restorative justice .....	472
10.8 Economic-ecological principle .....	481
10.9 Development as service/servant leadership .....	482
10.10 Simple life, value of being (leisure): notions of poverty and of time .....	485
10.11 Cultural beliefs at the heart of development .....	487
10.12 Resonance in the region .....	490
10.13 Merits and criticism .....	491
10.14 Conclusion .....	494
10.15 References .....	494
Chapter 11 .....	500
Differences between Happiness, Ubuntu and Buen Vivir
11.1 Introduction .....	501
11.2 Individual versus collective agency .....	501
11.3 Thinking from the mind versus heart .....	503
11.4 Formalization in policies, formats, indexes .....	507
11.5 Constitutional embedding and jurisprudence .....	508
11.6 Notions of equality .....	510
11.7 Nature-human unity versus human-unity .....	511
11.8 Plurinationality versus national cultural homogeneity .....	514
11.9 Foreign policies .....	519
11.10 Implementation issues .....	521
11.11 Comparison of legal and economic reconstruction of conventional theory .....	539
11.12 Convergence and differences with current progressive trends .....	548
11.13 Conclusion .....	556
11.14 References .....	557

Chapter 12 .....	561
The Role of Global South Views in the SDG Negotiations
12.1 Introduction .....	562
12.2 The SDG negotiation process .....	563
12.3 SDGs as an outcome .....	573
12.4 Conclusion .....	598
12.5 References .....	602
Chapter 13 .....	603
Epilogue: The Wheel of Values
13.1 Introduction .....	604
13.2 Mythology and diversity of views .....	610
13.3 The archetypes .....	611
13.4 Geographical model .....	617
13.5 Correspondences in Quecha culture, Buddhism, African Ubuntu principle .....	625
13.6 Annex: Regional wheels .....	633
13.7 References .....	643
Chapter 14 .....	644
Other Books in this Series
14.1 Gross National Happiness, its view on Law, Human Rights and Sustainable Development Goals .....	644
14.2 African Ubuntu, its view on Human Rights, Law and Sustainable Development Goals .....	646
14.3 Latin American Buen Vivir and Rights of Nature: Law, Human Rights and Sustainable Development .....	648
Appendix 1 .....	652
SDG Goals and Targets

LIST OF TABLES

Table 1.1	Interviews Bhutan-Gross National Happiness
Table 1.2	Interviews South Africa-Ubuntu
Table 1.3	Interviews Ecuador-Buen Vivir
Table 1.4	MDG-SDG interviews
Table 2.1	Decade zero '50: Truman, stages of growth and big push
Table 2.2	1 st development decade '60: unbalanced and balanced growth
Table 2.3	2nd development decade '70: growth with redistribution, basic needs, rural development
Table 2.4	3rd development decade '80: export led growth, structural adjustment, sustainability
Table 2.5	4th development decade '90: Adjustment with a human face, social capital, good governance
Table 2.6	5th development decade (2000): capability, alternative well-being, behavior economics
Table 2.7	6th development decade (2010): inclusive green growth, environmental justice
Table 2.8	Forms of participation
Table 2.9	Inclusive development
Table 2.10	Successive schools of post modernism
Table 2.11	Historic premises in economic thought
Table 3.1	Pros and cons of MDGs
Table 4.1	MDGs and key human rights
Table 5.1	The world as a village
Table 5.2	Different kinds of global public goods
Table 5.3	Millennium Development Actions
Table 6.1	Abbreviated OWG Goals compared to High Level Panel Goals and Rio+20 outcomes
Table 6.2	Comparison SDG-MDG goals
Table 6.3	UN consultation on goals and culture/SDG's targets on culture (UNESCO)
Table 6.4	Pros and cons of SDGs compared to MDGs
Table 6.5	SDGs and earlier MDG recommendations
Table 7.1	Jurisprudence involving Happiness principle in Bhutan
Table 7.2	Examples of GNH in SDG report

Table 7.3	Comparison of SDG values versus Buddhist Gross National Happiness values
Table 8.1	Restorative Justice principles derived from Ubuntu jurisprudence and practice South Africa
Table 8.2	Examples of Ubuntu in SDG report
Table 8.3	Comparison of SDG values versus Ubuntu values
Table 9.1	Jurisprudence Rights of Nature (RoN)
Table 9.2	Examples of Buen Vivir in SDG report
Table 9.3	Comparison of SDG and Buen Vivir approach
Table 10.1	Arguments pro and con Buddhist inspired law (reconstruction of law)
Table 10.2	Restorative justice in action (South Africa)
Table 10.3	Arguments pro and contra Ubuntu law (reconstruction of law)
Table 10.4	Arguments pro and con rights of nature
Table 11.1	Positive examples/potentials of implementation of Ubuntu, Happiness, Buen Vivir mentioned by interviews
Table 11.2	Implementation issues of Ubuntu, Happiness, Buen Vivir mentioned in interviews (non-exhaustive)
Table 11.3	Primal versus Western mind
Table 11.4	Legal deconstruction
Table 11.5	Economic deconstruction
Table 11.6	Social deconstruction (some examples)
Table 11.7	Gallup Well-being Index 2014 (Bhutan, Ecuador, South Africa)
Table 11.8	Gallup 2014 Well-Being Across the World and by Region Geographic Area
Table 12.1	SDG-process: negotiation positions in OWG documents
Table 12.2	Outcome of OWG: SDGs - views in interviews
Table 12.3	Comparison of SDG, Ubuntu, Happiness, Buen Vivir approach
Table 13.1	Eight Dimensions of Development & Governance
Table 13.2	The 8 feasts in Quechua culture and Greek archetypes
Table 13.3	Greek Archetypes and Inca/Aztek mythology and African Ubuntu philosophy
Table 13.4	Correspondence of chakra's and archetypes
Table 13.5	Greek archetypes and three worlds in Quechua philosophy
Table 13.6	Correspondence of feminine archetypes with masculine archetypes

LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS

- Figure 2.0 Wheel of Values/United States
- Figure 2.1 Inclusive growth
- Figure 2.2 Concentric identity (individual)
- Figure 2.3 Translational identity (individual)
- Figure 2.4 Translational circular identity
- Figure 2.5 Linear Collective identity
- Figure 2.6 Circular Collective identity
- Figure 2.7 Linear Collective concentric identity
- Figure 2.8 Circular Collective circular concentric identity
- Figure 3.0 Wheel of Values/Europe
- Figure 4.0 Wheel of Values/Eurasia
- Figure 5.0 Millenium Development Goals
- Figure 5.1 Wheel of Development with Millennium Development Actions
- Figure 5.2 Wheel of Governance
- Figure 5.3 Towards a Wheel of Values
- Figure 6.0 Sustainable Development Goals
- Figure 6.1 Inputs for the formulation of the post-2015 development agenda
- Figure 6.2 High Level Panel Report Goals
- Figure 6.3 SDGs
- Figure 6.4 SDG model
- Figure 6.5 SDG representation. The Netherlands' distance from achieving SDGs'2030 targets.
- Figure 7.0 Wheel of Values/Asia
- Figure 7.1 Happiness concept of balance and harmony influencing MDG/SDG clusters
- Figure 7.2 SDGs and Happiness principle
- Figure 8.0 Wheel of Values/Africa
- Figure 8.1 Relation of Ubuntu to GPG, human rights and SDGs
- Figure 8.2 Wheel of Development including Ubuntu
- Figure 8.3 Ubuntu and SDGs
- Figure 9.0 Wheel of Values/Latin America
- Figure 9.1 Buen Vivir influencing MDG/SDG clusters
- Figure 9.2 SDGs and Buen Vivir
- Figure 10.0 Wheel of Values/Asia/Africa/Latin America
- Figure 10.1 Meeting of opposing cosmic forces: Feminine (dark) – masculine (light)/life force-life patterns

- Figure 10.2 Leadership and traditional society
- Figure 11.0 Wheel of Values/Indigenous Polynesia/Australia/New Zealand
- Figure 11.1 The three worlds in Quechua philosophy
- Figure 11.2 Rainbow nation, cultural diversity, multi or plurinationality
- Figure 12.0 Wheel of Values/Middle East
- Figure 12.1 Ubuntu, Happiness and Buen Vivir and the SDGs
- Figure 13.0 Wheel of Values and Archetypes
- Figure 13.1 Wheel of Development and Archetypes
- Figure 13.2 Masculine archetypes
- Figure 13.3 Masculine and Feminine male archetypes
- Figure 13.4 Wheel of archetypes and values
- Figure 13.5 Wheel of Archetypes and the 4 elements
- Figure 13.6 The 8 or 9 elements including emptiness
- Figure 13.7 Regional wheel of the world
- Figure 13.8 Geographical wheel of regions and mythological archetypes
- Figure 13.9 Geographical wheel of values and functions in society
- Figure 13.10 Subdivisions of Archetypes
- Figure 13.11 General containing specific and vice versa
- Figure 13.12 Wheel of United Nations organizations and of political bodies
- Figure 13.13 Wheel scientific disciplines
- Figure 13.14 Archetype influence of regions
- Figure 13.15 Life joined in Ubuntu: Ubu brought to life by archetype (deities) life force Ntu
- Figure 13.16 The three worlds and the human body in Quechua philosophy
- Figure 13.17 The world as one body: Chakra's, corresponding Archetypes and World Regions
- Figure 13.18 Wheel of Europe
- Figure 13.19 Wheel of Latin America
- Figure 13.20 Wheel of Asia
- Figure 13.21 Wheel of Middle East
- Figure 13.22 Wheel of Eurasia
- Figure 13.23 Wheel of Africa
- Figure 13.24 Wheel of West-Africa
- Figure 13.25 Wheel of Southern Africa
- Figure 13.26 Historical wheels of the world
- Figure 13.27 Feminine archetypes

THE COMPLEX ACHIEVEMENT OF THE SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT GOALS, AND DIALOGUE BEYOND 2030 BY MACHARIA KAMAU

As ambassador to the United Nations for Kenya, I was witness to the complex proceedings of negotiating the Sustainable Development Goals, as well as the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development that formed the official adoption of the SDGs. This three-and-a-half-year journey of the negotiation of these goals was one of the most complex negotiations done within the United Nations system, touching upon virtually every topic and involving all agencies of the UN, alongside civil society, business, experts and, of course, governments. It was at times an exhausting exercise of which the outcome was unknown and success not assured with many opposing, seemingly irreconcilable views. To some it seemed impossible and even absurd to want to strive for such a comprehensive framework of both socio-economic development, sustainability and peace. Had we not worked efficiently alongside one another, safely within our own pillars of development, nature conservation and security, for decades and was this integrative effort not going to backfire? How the impossible was achieved, I have described in the book, Transforming Multilateral Diplomacy, The inside story of the Sustainable Development Goals (2018) together with Pamela Chasek and David O'Connor.

The current book that you are about to read takes this process one step further, trying to comprehend and integrate the value dimensions in the SDGs. How to harness the power of culture for sustainable development, the driving force of peoples and societies? I myself voiced strong support for including culture in the SDGs as a driving force for development. During the negotiations, it was treated as a cross-cutting issue, influencing all goals and targets. UNESCO recognized this as an important break-through, reaffirming culture's crucial contribution to development.

In (Southern) Africa, that connecting force is called Ubuntu (or similar expressions in different languages) of which South Africa is the most significant proponent. It signifies African brother(sister)hood, in which we recognize the humanity in the other and the sacredness of all living things. The African Union (AU) recognized Ubuntu as an important African heritage in 2021, during South Africa's Presidency of the AU. During the negotiations other nations brought forward the concept of Mother Earth, especially Bolivia and Ecuador, which found its expression in the preamble of the SDGs and the phrasing Harmony with Nature in one of the sub-targets. Bhutan launched its Happiness movement together with many scholars and 'new' (wellbeing) economists and organized a large conference at UN headquarters around its Buddhist concept of Gross National Happiness in the run-up to the SDG negotiations. The world that is behind these expressions is explained in this book.

The book is on the one hand appreciative of the complex achievement of the SDGs and at the same time critical of dominant modernist economic narratives that at times may overshadow concepts of community and the intrinsic value of nature. It questions the domain of culture from all angles, both philosophical, legal and policy and how it plays out in the international dimension. The book is an impressive effort to bring these various wide-ranging worlds, spanning Europe, Asia, Africa and Latin America together, and to expand the horizon of the human rights dialogue as well as the sustainability and development discourse in a positive way. It is a must read for all those that are interested in working in the multilateral domain or scholars that are involved in truly inclusive sustainable development. As an African, I hope that this dialogue of cultures will foster peace and the spirit of togetherness that is Ubuntu.

Nairobi, October 2024

PREFACE:

MY PERSONAL JOURNEY

My motivation for undertaking this research is rooted in my early adult life. Studying in South Africa, I opened my eyes for the first time to a ‘non-Western’ perspective<sup>1</sup>. Living in an almost entirely black student residence complex, I became acutely aware of my otherness, being labeled ‘white’. Witnessing the transformation of South Africa to a multiparty democracy, in 1994, I realized being part of the end of an era: the last openly (semi) ‘colonial’ state surrendered to ‘modern democracy’. Being part of a black community had its advantages: I learned to see the world through African eyes. Of all the conversations I had, the one that remained most vividly with me, was about ‘Ubuntu’. It seemed to evoke an emotion in my interlocutors, during one of my visits into the townships, that was unparalleled. Everyone had something to say about it. After having posed the question ‘what is Ubuntu?’, I was encircled by a group of young people, all present at the house cum shop we had dropped by. Each person seemed to search to the bottom of their heart to explain to me at length this very important subject. Even the man with money in his sock, labeled by my friend as ‘he’s a crook’, shared with me his soul-wisdom, briefly forgetting his criminal self. That afternoon on an empty field, outside a home in Guguletu, remains forever etched in my mind. The other image I was to take home with me was that of Nelson Mandela giving his inauguration speech as newly elected President of South Africa, and the inexplicable turn of fate that got me a seat on the front row, never having participated in any anti-apartheid activism. After the guests departed, I briefly sat on his chair contemplating what it would be like to be a world leader and what would be the message I would carry. After all, some of my black consciousness friends considered him a ‘traitor’ to the cause, wishing a less conciliatory approach. The experience created a debt for the future, one that I was to realize and fulfill only 20 years later.

The next step took me to Asia, now as a Foreign Service official posted to Colombo, Sri Lanka, 1998. Never losing face, the Sri Lankans pretended not to notice the black face of the partner accompanying me. Nevertheless a local staff confided in me that it had immediately changed their perspective of me on arrival, in a positive way. I was presumed to be more sympathetic to them, although some Asians did consider themselves superior to Africans. This contradictory logic did not seem to disturb them. Never having intended to study Buddhism - those spiritual realities were implicitly frowned upon in conservative diplomatic circles - I stumbled on a Tibetan teacher in a massage center. Much against my will - I wanted a career - I was spoon-fed Asian wisdom. This was complemented by lectures of the landscaper, weekly designing his intricate patterns in the feng-shui Japanese garden of my home, whilst talking to the plants, for which service I refused to pay my landlord, not understanding what that had to do with 'good living'.

---

<sup>1</sup> I use the word ‘non-Western’ between inverted commas as it signifies that the West is the standard against which everything else is measured, which is contentious, because it excludes others.

The journey then took me to Iraq, in 2001, a country that we did not enjoy diplomatic relations with, and therefore I was posted in Ankara, Turkey. The Turks did not allow diplomats to cross the border to the semi-autonomous Kurdish area created by Western intervention, and therefore till today the country remains 'undiscovered territory' to me. A turn of history was to oust me from my file after two years, the American invasion in Iraq and subsequent official diplomatic relations with Bagdad. Turkey became my domain of work. The Turks received me with their proverbial hospitality. I became a 'daughter' of a Turkish, Islamic, family, that after I departed from Turkey, lamented at each visit: 'We are still hungry for you.'

For long I struggled with the 'sense' of diplomatic life, where one had to frequently discard the little wisdom one had acquired about the place where one lived, invariably being posted to another bewilderingly unknown continent. North America became my forte in 2006, although for once this did not involve studying the Americans, but mainly following their policies abroad. Who were we, as a small nation, to involve ourselves in domestic policy choices of our most important ally? With the exception of Guantanamo Bay and the death penalty, that was left to the Americans themselves. Involved in the preparations of the 400 year commemoration of the relations between The Netherlands and New York, I had my first encounter with native American wisdom during a documentary festival organized in Amsterdam. In my private time I made my first travel to shamanistic Peru.

Arriving at a think tank with all this wealth of knowledge and being infused by academic circles, finally my life mission started to take shape, in writing reports on development issues, as one of the secretaries to the independent

Advisory Council for International Affairs (AIV). Moreover, I was to communicate the ‘non-Western’ to my Western interlocutors engaged in development of ‘underdeveloped’ nations. This did not happen without a clash. Upon my enthusiastically naïve suggestion that we needed to include the indigenous perspective of the Africans, Asians and Indigenous Americans themselves in shaping a new international development agenda, I met with fierce rebuttal. Cultural relativism or even the risk thereof, had no place in human rights debates. For all our want of participation, non-discrimination and accountability, this was one bridge too far. Much to my dismay there was no space for my text on other worldviews in the Millennium Development Goals report I had to prepare for the AIV. I then concluded that I would make the Global South perspective on the MDGs the subject of my research.

‘Why’, I was asked upon my first publication on Ubuntu, in the Development Studies Research Journal, ‘do you task yourself to communicate what Africans themselves should communicate?’ That was a question to think about. For one, I riposted, having engaged in this research and expecting scholars analyzing Africa on my side, I was baffled to find out that they relegated ‘Ubuntu’ to the land of fairy tales (and anthropologists). For another, perhaps these truths were so self-evident to our Global South counterparts, that they long did not see the need to explicitly communicate this. ‘What?!’, did a South African official ask me, upset upon hearing about so much criticism to Ubuntu and apparently unaware that the main tenet of his government’s foreign policy was cynically frowned upon by specialists on African politics, ‘What, do they then think that ‘Ubuntu’ is?’ I had to admit ‘they’ probably did not have many thoughts about it at all. He quickly recaptured himself in a diplomatic pose by saying: ‘Well, thank you for admiring our culture’. Equally sad and in a similar exasperated fashion, my Ecuadorian academic interlocutor asked me: ‘But why? Why are they against Buen Vivir?’, while the Bhutanese in their friendly Asian demeanor would simply nod upon hearing my story and pride themselves that their Gross National Happiness is far ahead of the newly adopted Sustainable Development Goals.

After a short stint as sactions coordinator, I moved on to coordinate UNESCO, human rights and SDG affairs at the Ministry of Culture, Education and Science, in the hope to find more connection with the policy field of development and culture. Whilst moving back to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs as a strategic advisor for the Western Hemisphere, 4 years later, I attempted to teach some of my knowledge to my coworkers and compatriots. This book is based on my (updated) PhD research, which has been published in four different books.

DEDICATIONS

This research is dedicated to all whom I encountered during my travels, but especially my African friend Vuyisile (meaning ‘the one that brings happiness to others’ in Xhosa), my Tibetan teacher Tsering (meaning ‘Long Life’) and the people of the Himalaya and Andes mountains that welcomed me without knowing me and helped me discover their world, specifically Alberto Acosta.

Furthermore, I dedicated it to my academic teachers Willem van Genugten and Joyeeta Gupta (promotores), who believed in my project; to Arie de Ruijter, Rolph van der Hoeven and Liza van Paaschen (Advisory Council for International Affairs), working with me on what has now become Chapter 3, 4 and 5 of this book; to Rob Vos of UNDESA inspiring economic Chapter 5; to my colleague Anne Poorta who negotiated the SDGs for the Netherlands in New York; Selim Jahan of UNDP for believing in my idea of the wheel of values; Akif Atlı and the Turkish Atlı family and my parents Pien and Dirk for always supporting me.

I am also hugely indebted to my government for granting me the postings abroad that were my main teaching ground and, moreover, sponsoring my research, as possibly informative to foreign policy making.

As the Afrikaner song goes: ‘Ek wil reis rond die wêreld. Om huiستoe te gaan. Ek wil praat met 'n vreemde. Om myself te verstaan’ (I need to travel around the world, to go home. I need to talk to a stranger to understand myself - Stef Bos).

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Many people enabled me to complete this work and supported me throughout. I want to first of all give a special thanks to my parents for their support and their editorial work, including editing the many literature references.

I am greatly indebted to my professors. I thank Willem van Genugten for taking me on as a student and for his patience in guiding me through the process of scientific research and sharing his knowledge on international law and his connection to South Africa (North West University). I thank Joyeeta Gupta for her friendship and critical eye, sharing with me the theory on Third World Approaches to International Law, general development theory, case study methodology and discussions on the SDGs. In general I am grateful for their enthusiasm as well as critical view of my work, and above all for believing in me.

For the theoretical chapter, I want to thank Holly Ritchie for introducing me to critical realism and sharing her PhD with me. For the chapter on the MDGs I am grateful to the Advisory Council for International Affairs (AIV) for allowing me to publish the material I developed under their auspices, and especially Rolph van der Hoeven as head of the ad hoc commission, as well as Annelies Zoomers for giving me the first opportunity to speak about my ideas during an international conference. I want to thank Selim Jahan and Rob Vos for encouraging me to continue my research, as well as Arie de Ruijter and Tiemo Oostenbrink for giving me the space to do so. I thank Quin Genée for making the picture of the wheel of development. For the chapter on the SDGs I am indebted to the Dutch delegation at the United Nations for facilitating my visit to New York, especially Anne Poorta for sharing his knowledge on the SDG negotiations, as well as the Dutch delegation at UNESCO for organizing my visit to Paris: ambassador Lionel Veer, Margot Llompart, Mascha Wismans and Stein van Oosteren. I want to thank Leo van der Vlist for enabling me to attend the World Conference of Indigenous People (WCIP) as a member of the Netherlands Centre for Indigenous People (NCIV), and Kenneth Deer of the Mohawk Nation for selecting us to participate while many were turned down.

For the Bhutan chapter I am indebted to the Bhutanese ambassador Sonam Tsong, Jigme Tenzin and other staff in Brussels for organizing my 5 week visa to their beautiful country. I also thank the representation of Bhutan in New York for receiving me. A twist of fate landed me in the midst of the 'Friends of Bhutan' during their 25 year anniversary in Middelburg, who gracefully accepted me, at the initiation of my Gross National Happiness study. I want to specially thank the Honorary Consul and his wife in The Hague, Cees and Namgay Klein, for their hospitality at their home, Henk de Jong and Erica Sluyters for sharing their movies, Italian Romolo Gandolfo for sharing his invaluable contacts and insights, and German Gregor Verhufen for sharing all his literature. I want to thank the Centre for Bhutan Studies (CBS) and its staff for hosting me in Bhutan, while busy with the Gross National Happiness Conference in Paro, and the Bhutanese Ministry of Foreign Affairs, especially Sonam Tobgay, and Mercury Travels Director Karma Namgyel, for making my in country trip possible and unforgettable. The owners of Jambayang Resort and Wangchuk Resort Taba gave me personal treatment and made my stay very agreeable. I appreciate the comments I got from Françoise Pommaret on the Happiness chapter. I thank Jit Tsering for answering my questions from abroad.

For the South Africa chapter I am indebted to my earlier friends there, especially Vuyisile, Phoebe, Refiloe, Ronita, Modify, my professors in 1994, especially Tiya Maluwa and Tom Bennett, and the unforgettable time I had at the University of Capetown, the UCT legal aid clinic and the UCT Choir for Africa (see foreword). I am grateful to Prof. Mogobe Ramose for informally reviewing my published Ubuntu article as well as Dr. Michael Onyebuchi Eze. I want to also thank my friend Chudi Ukpabi for spending many hours with me on his experiences with regional organizations in Africa. I enjoyed attending the Ubuntu lecture of Prof. Elmien du Plessis in Tilburg. I thank Albie Sachs for taking time off his busy schedule to share some thoughts with me, while on tour promoting the movie on his life, and Cormac Cullinan for showing me the linking pin between Ubuntu and rights of nature as well as for dancing the night away in Paris together with the Rights of Nature Tribunal members. I am grateful to my friend Dr. Henk Haenen for reviewing the Ubuntu chapter. And I also thank the embassies of South Africa in The Hague, especially Anna Maria Jojozi, and in New York for cooperating with my research.

For the Ecuador chapter I am hugely indebted to Dr. Craig Kauffman for sharing his database of court cases on the rights of nature and exchanging notes, at an unexpected last minute meeting in a jungle lodge during my last weekend in Ecuador, as well as to Karine Koolsbergen for her many hours work on translation in English of the court cases on the rights of nature. I appreciated the help of the consulate of Ecuador in The Hague in making contact with the government officials in Ecuador; and thank the Minister of Buen Vivir, Freddy Ehlers, for receiving me, and his staff for their kind help, as well as the SENPLADES officials. I owe Prof. Alberto Acosta for introducing me to the critical voices in Ecuador. Carlos Zorrilla gave me an unforgettable experience in showing me the real Buen Vivir life, in his lodge high up in the misty mountains and at the indigenous Otovalo market. I want to thank El Cafecito and its volunteers for hosting me for 5 weeks and the friendship of the owner Tony Lloyd, introducing me to many more people. The Rights of Nature Tribunal welcomed me in their midst in Paris. Nati Greene was very helpful in answering all my questions as well as Dr. Ramiro Avila. I appreciate the comments I got from former HIVOS expert on Latin America, Teyo van der Schoot, on the Buen Vivir chapter, and the help I got from Lennert van Oorschot in (re)drawing the map of indigenous languages of Latin America. I am especially indebted to Dr. Vanessa Freerks for proof-reading all my manuscripts.

A special thanks to all of those I interviewed who I cannot mention by name for reasons of confidentiality, in the above-mentioned countries, as well as at various UN organizations. I express my gratitude to Arjen Veldt for photographing the artwork belonging to the Wheel of Values.

I am indebted to the Netherlands Ministry of Foreign Affairs for allowing me a year free of regular duty to work on my thesis and granting me an additional unpaid year's leave of absence. I want to thank Roel van der Veen for believing in my undertaking. I thank the Ministry of Education, Culture and Science for their patience in the final year of preparation when my mind occasionally wandered off towards 'Development as service'. I especially thank my colleague Peter Wansink for his impartial view in the final thesis meetings and my direct colleagues at the international affairs and at the heritage and arts department for their general support. I was honored to receive a travel grant from the Van Tussenbroek Foundation for my field research in Bhutan.

I would also like to mention those people that gave me the opportunity to promote my PhD before and after completion, in subsequent articles and lectures, such as former Dutch UNESCO ambassador Lionel Veer, Leon Heuts as Director of Thinking Planet, the Society for International Development under the direction of Dr. René Grotenhuis and Afke de Groot, in cooperation with the Institute of Social Studies (Dr. Kees Biecart), Prof. Dr. Heinz Kimmerle, Dr. Renate Schepen, the Worldconnectors and Earth Charter, as well as the International Centre for Asia studies ICAS (Africa-Asia conferences) and the Asia Pacific Centre for Education for International Understanding (APCEIU) in South Korea (former director Utak Chung and his assistant Anna Chung).

Furthermore, UNESCO World Humanities Forum (South Korea), UNESCO World Humanities Conference (Belgium), ILAS-HUFS Hankuk University South Korea, Universidad Central de Chile, University of Newcastle UK (Dr. Sarina Theys), University of Pretoria Philosophy Seminar Series, Independent Institute for Education South Africa, Dr. Birgit Boogaard of Wageningen University, Annette Mul of Ubuntu Society, Dr. Louise Müller of Leiden University, Prof. Dr. Angela Roothaan of the Free University of Amsterdam and Dr. Philip Ademola Olayoku of West African transitional Justice Centre (WATJ) Nigeria, Centre for African Smart Public Values (CASP) Switzerland (Dr. Emamdeen Fohim), European Solutions Development Network (ESDN) Vienna (Thomas Mulholland), University of Colombo Sri Lanka (Dr. Maneesha Wanasinghe-Pasqual), Oxford University International Centre for Bhutan Studies UK (Prof. Dr. Sabine Alkire), UiTM Malaysia (Prof. Dr. Margaret Chan Kit Yok), University of Dar es Salaam Tanzania, University of Grenoble Wellbeing Forum France (prof. Dr. Isabelle Cassiers, Pascale Fressoz, Celina Whitaker), University of Antwerp Belgium (Tom Viane, Petra van Brabant), IASC and University of Arizona, European Association of Development Institutes (EADI) conference Lissabon Portugal (Prof. Dr. Andy Sumner, Dr. Kei Otuski), Government of Roumania (Laszlo Bortely), Nordic Bildung Society (Sandra Verbruggen, Lene Rachel Andersen), University of Costa Rica and Gaia Foundation (Javier Ortiz), University for Peace Costa Rica (Mirian Vilela), SEKEM and Social Initiatives Forum Egypt.

In the Netherlands, Africa Study Centre Leiden (Prof. Dr. Tom Dietz) and Nederlandse Vereniging van Afrika Studies NVAS, University of Humanistiek UVH Utrecht (Prof. Dr. Anja Machielse, Marike van den Doel), Delft Technical University (Klaas van der Tempel), Free University Amsterdam (Prof. Dr. Fons Trompenaars, Sylvia van de Bunt), Utrecht University (Prof. Dr. Annelies Zoomers, Dr. Daan van Uhm), Vereniging Rechtsfilosofie en Rechtssociologie VWR-VSR, University of Amsterdam (i.a. Dr. Yves van Leynseele; Dr. Ties van der Werf; New Economics Festival), The Hague Campus University of Leiden, Minerva Art Academy Groningen (Dr. Henk-Jan Laats), Institute of Social Studies Degrowth Conference, Hogeschool Saxion Enschede (Saskia Zwolle), Webster University (Jill Adler) as well as Rijkswaterstaat, College van Rijksadviseurs Ministry of Internal Affairs, Slot Loevestein, StagingWood Oerol Festival

(Elmo Vermijs), Pakhuis de Zwijger Amsterdam /Indigenous Liberation (Max de Ploeg), Stopecocide Nederland, Prince Claus Fund Amsterdam, the Rights of Nature group of friends in the Netherlands, Municipalities of Deventer, Arnhem, Apeldoorn, Philosophical societies of Groningen, Leusden (Zincafé) and Bilthoven (Eric van Kregten), Anthroposophical Society Vredehuis The Hague (Bert de Graaff), Earth Gathering The Hague, Time is Now Foundation (Marte Visser), Voice4Thought, Fourworlds Europe (Karin Lindemans/Phil Lane), Brabant Zorg (Bert Visser), Partos, Digest the Future (Petra Ardaï), MaatschappijWij, New Financial Magazine and journalist Elke van Riel. My colleagues at the Dutch MFA who hosted several discussion roundtables (departments for Africa; inclusive green growth; social development; SDGs; international development); legal affairs and special thanks to Melvin van der Veen.

Special mention also goes to those who hosted my art exhibition the Wheel of Values, connected to my PhD: the Africa Study Centre Leiden (Marieke van Winden, Rik Jongenelen), Rathenau Institute, The Hague (Dr. Melanie Peters), Alliance Française Rotterdam (Véronique Julian), Foundation Living with the Earth Etten (Lies and Bart Visscher-Endeveld), Pareldag Bezuidenhout, The Hague. The main artworks are represented in the book.

ABBREVIATIONS

AIV Advisory Council for International Affairs
ALBA Bolivarian Alliance for the Peoples of Our America
AU African Union
ASEAN Association for South East Asian Nations
BRICS Brazil, Russia, India, China and South Africa
CBS Center of Bhutan Studies
CC Constitutional Court
CELAC Community of Latin American and Caribbean States
CERD International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination
CEDAW International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women
CFTA Continental Free Trade Area
CRC Convention on the Rights of the Child
EAC East African Community
ECOWAS Economic Community of Western African States,
FDI Foreign Direct Investment
FLACSO Latin America Faculty of Social Sciences
GDP Gross Domestic Product
GLOF glacial lake outburst flood
GNP Gross National Product
GNH Gross National Happiness
GNI Gross National Income
GPGs Global Public Goods
HIPC Highly Indebted Poor Countries Initiative
HLP High Level Panel of Eminent Persons on the Post-2015 Development Agenda
HLPF High Level Political Forum on Sustainable Development
ICCPR International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights
ICESCR International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights
IDA International Development Agency (of the World Bank)
IGN Intergovernmental Negotiations on the post-2015 Development Agenda.
IMF International Monetary Fund
IP Indigenous People
LAC Latin America and the Caribbean

LDCs Least Developed Countries
LICs Least Income Countries
MDG Millennium Development Goals
MFA Ministry of Foreign Affairs
MICs Middle Income Countries
NEPAD New Partnership for Africa's Development
NIEO New International Economic Order
NGO Non-governmental organization
OAS (Organization of American States)
ODA Official Development Assistance
OECD Organization of Economic Cooperation and Development
OECD/DAC Development Assistance Committee of the OECD
OHCHR Office of the High Commissioner of Human Rights
OWG Open Working Group on the Sustainable Development Goals
5P's People, Prosperity, Planet, Peace, Partnership
PM Prime Minister
PPP purchasing power parity
PRSPs Poverty Reduction Strategy Papers
R2P Responsibility to Protect
Rio+20 United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development
RoN Rights of Nature
SA South Africa
SAARC South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation
SADC Southern Africa Development Community
SCA Supreme Court of Appeal (of South Africa)
SDGs Sustainable Development Goals
SRHR Sexual Reproductive Health and Rights
SIDS Small Island Developing States
TWAAIL Third World Approaches to International Law
UHC Universal Health Coverage
UN United Nations
UNASUR Union of South American Nations
UNCTAD United Nations Conference for Trade and Development
UNDESA United Nations Department for Economic and Social Affairs
UNDP United Nations Development Program
UNDRIP United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples
UNECA United Nations Economic Commission for Africa
UNESCO United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization
UNICEF United Nations Children's Fund
UNIFEM United Nations Development Fund for Women

UNFCCC United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change
UNFPA United Nations Populations Fund
UNSG United Nations Secretary General
UNWOMEN United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women
USA United States of America
USD US Dollar
USSR Union of Soviet Republics
VNR Voluntary National Review (on SDGs)
WCIP World Conference on Indigenous Peoples
WTO World Trade Organization

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

For Pien ('Yahweh will increase') and Dirk ('gifted ruler')

This book investigates how three non-Western well-being theories – Happiness<sup>2</sup>, Ubuntu, and Buen Vivir – can contribute to the (operationalization of) the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and the drafting of future development agendas.

Chapter 1 gives a brief introduction to the research question, approach and method. Applying a Western academic lens to non-Western worldviews is problematic as this still traps the worldviews in a logical positivist perspective. It presupposes that one is able to place oneself outside reality and not partake in it. Therefore a critical realist approach is taken to present described worldviews as neutrally as possible and to contrast them with conventional theoretical approaches without framing them in any particular theory. This de- and reconstruction is derived from (the approaches developed within) Third World Approaches to International Law (TWAIL) and post-colonial economics.

The tools used in critical realism involve: (a) taking an interdisciplinary approach and accepting a layered reality; (b) looking at reality as a 'social construction' (by individuals and groups in permanent movement) rather than looking at reality as a self-evident, objective truth and accepting 'openness' instead of 'closure' (defined boundaries) in a celebration of subjectivity; (c) accepting language as a constitutive factor for any worldview as well as discourse (hence the importance of oral traditions and the use of proverbs in non-Western worldviews); (d) being aware of power as explicitly or implicitly determining actions of others, and which can go beyond institutions or individuals (so beyond structure and agency), embedded not only in politics, but also in socialization processes (conformity), psychology and 'ideological boundaries of participation' and which is interwoven with knowledge systems. These tools are applied to expose 'Other' realities beyond the consensual SDGs, negotiated by Northern and Southern countries. The study therefore contributes to bridging the

---

<sup>2</sup> When referring to 'Happiness' in this book (with capital H), I mean Gross National Happiness (GNH).